ANNOUNCEMENTS

African Children's Choir

The African Children's Choir features delightful children ages 7 through 11, from Kenya, Uganda and Rwanda. Many have lost one or both parents through the devastation of war, famine and disease, and in spite of the tragedy that has marred their young lives, these musically-gifted children are radiant with hope and wonderfully entertaining. They melt the hearts of audiences with their charming smiles and joyful African melodies and dance. Their voices sing out on behalf of Africa's 12 million AIDS orphans. They represent the future of the entire continent, demonstrating the potential to become strong leaders for a better future in their homeland. Minimum cost is $18, and this Wharton Center event begins at 8:00pm. See www.whartoncenter.com for more information and to purchase tickets.

Team MSU Sends Treated Nets to Africa

Malaria kills a million kids every year. $10 will buy a bed net and save a life. Help Team MSU send treated nets directly to Africa. See <http://special.newsroom.msu.edu/nets/index.php> and also <http://msunothingbutnets.blogspot.com/>.

Dissertation Support Group

This group is to support graduate students who are currently working on their doctoral dissertations. A process of sharing, goal-setting, and mutual accountability is used to assist ABDs in becoming Ph.D.s. Please send an e-mail to gradwrsp@msu.edu to register. Begins March 25, 2008 to April 22, 2008 each tuesdays from 12:00pm - 1:00pm at the Graduate School, 113 Linton Hall.

FALL 2008 NEW COURSE ANNOUNCEMENTS

China and Globalization: GEO 890

Dr. Guo Chen, Wed 6-8:50pm, 120 Geography Bldg
This course engages up-front with the ongoing social, economic, environmental, and spatial challenges facing contemporary urban China. Thematic topics will include rural-urban migration, housing development, poverty and inequality, new economic spaces, urban sprawl, and sustainability. Course materials will be drawn from classic and popular texts, representing inside and outside perspectives on these urban processes by urban economic geographers, China specialists, and social and political scientists. Course discussions will be situated within the context of theoretical debates about the neoliberal state, economic globalization, and place and space. The course addresses both contemporary academic research and media commentary that has captured the spatial transformations in urban China. This course is offered jointly by Geography and Global Urban Studies in Social Science.

GRANTS AND FELLOWSHIPS

The Gender, Justice, and Environmental Change (GJEC) Fellowships

The GJEC Program, in the Center for Gender in Global Context (GenCen), is pleased to announce two new fellowships for MSU graduate students for the 2008-09 academic year. Generous funding provided by MSU's Graduate School has allowed for the development of three $10,000 fellowship opportunities in the following categories:

GJEC Dissertation Research Fellowship:

Ph.D. students at MSU who have completed all requirements for their degree with the exception of their dissertation research. Applicants must have dissertation projects that focus on the gender dimensions of environmental and/or agricultural change.

ANNOUNCEMENTS *continuedGJEC Dissertation Completion Fellowship:

Ph.D. students at MSU who have completed all requirements for their degree program including dissertation research. Applicants' dissertations must focus on gender or other social inequalities as they relate to environmental and/or agricultural change.

Funding must be used during the 2008-09 academic year. Students must apply for the fellowships by April 15, 2008. Applications are available online at <http://www.gjec.msu.edu/fellowship.htm>. Contact at gencen@msu.edu or 517-353-5040.

World Agroforestry Centre (ICRAF) Women's Postdoctoral Research Fellowships

The World Agroforestry Centre is establishing a Women's Postdoctoral Research Fellowship Programme, with guidance from the CGIAR Gender & Diversity Program. In order to provide immediate opportunities to women entering research and to retain women who do research the World Agroforestry Centre is in the first instance committing US$300,000 annually from its modest core budget to launch the scheme. Women postgraduates are expected to hold a Doctoral degree in a field related to agriculture, agroforestry, biodiversity, biometrics, capacity building, climate change, ecology, economics, environmental policy, forestry, genetic resources, geography, hydrology, impact assessment, institutional strengthening, land degradation, marketing, natural products, natural resource management, or sociology.

The minimum term for employment is two years. The request from the program for each Fellow should cover salary, benefits, transport, women's leadership courses, computing needs, office needs, travel and research expenses. Interested applicants are encouraged to apply through one of our five Regional Coordinators or six Global Research Project Leaders identified in the application form. However, applications can also be made via email: icrafhru@cgiar.org. ICRAF is seeking to support both women post-docs from previous interactions as well as new individuals who may help contribute to our new strategy. Applications will be considered throughout the year although the first round will likely be decided by applications received before 4 April 2008. See <http://www.worldagroforestry.org/> for more information.

Interdisciplinary Inquiry and Teaching Fellowship Program

The Graduate School at Michigan State University (MSU) and James Madison College (MSU) are sponsoring a new opportunity for graduate students to prepare for such work—the Interdisciplinary Inquiry and Teaching Fellowship Program (IIT). The primary goal of the IIT Fellowship Program is to broaden and enrich the professional development experience of a diverse group of graduate students by placing them within an environment, James Madison College, with an established tradition in excellence in undergraduate teaching. Students selected for this full-year program will work closely with faculty at James Madison to engage in structured discussions on pedagogy and practice, on interdisciplinary course design and curriculum development, and on general interaction with undergraduates. Fellows will be mentored in reflecting on their own teaching experiences in a systematic way in light of these discussions. In addition, Fellows in the program will have an opportunity to work with select faculty teaching in the College's new major in Comparative Cultures and Politics to investigate questions concerning the intellectual coherence and viability of research and teaching that seeks to integrate the social sciences and the humanities. The IIT Fellowship Program is for doctoral students in the social sciences and humanities with an interest in interdisciplinary inquiry and undergraduate teaching. The program welcomes applicants from the Colleges Arts and Letters, Social Sciences, Education, and Communications Arts and Sciences. Each fellow will receive $5,000 to help support project expenses and/or travel to a conference to disseminate findings. Applicants should be enrolled full-time in a program leading to a PhD, be in good academic standing, and making progress on their degrees; and, they must have previous teaching experience. Applicants should submit the attached application form; a CV; and, a brief essay that describes their career goals, their interest in interdisciplinary inquiry, and why they are interested in the IIT Fellowship Program. Applications must be submitted on or before March 31, 2008. Announcements of fellowship recipients will be made by April 11, 2008. For further information or questions regarding the program, please contact Dr. Colleen Tremonte in James Madison College, 371 North Case Hall, or by email (tremonte@msu.edu).

The William and Flora Hewlett Foundation/IIE Dissertation Fellowship (Africa)

The Institute of International Education (IIE) is now accepting applications for the Dissertation Fellowship in Population, Reproductive Health, and Economic Development. The two-year fellowships of up to $20,000 per year will be awarded by The William and Flora Hewlett Foundation and IIE. The fellowships are open to students currently enrolled in Ph.D. programs in sub-Saharan Africa. Students in economics, economic demography, geography, and epidemiology are especially encouraged to apply.

ANNOUNCEMENTS continued

These fellowships will support dissertation research on topics that examine how population dynamics and family planning and reproductive health (FP/RH) influence economic development, including economic growth, poverty reduction, and equity. Dissertations that address population and development issues pertinent to the African continent are especially encouraged. The research must include a strong quantitative component, with an emphasis on rigorous data analysis. We encourage the development or use of new statistical methods. Finally, the research must have a strong policy-relevant component, demonstrating an interest in communicating research results with program managers, planners, and policymakers.

The deadline for applying is April 30, 2008. Please submit the following:

- * Completed application cover sheet. (Attached)
- * Curriculum Vita with full list of educational and other professional activities.
- * Statement of intent to pursue a dissertation examining the linkages of population-family planning/reproductive health and economic development. Please identify the specific question to be addressed; provide a brief synopsis of the relevant literature demonstrating how your research will contribute to the Fellowship Program's research objective; describe the data you expect to use and how you expect to use it; and summarize expected outcomes (maximum of twenty pages).
- * Schedule for completing the dissertation.
- * Budget for use of the fellowship award.
- * Two letters of recommendation. One from your academic adviser and one from another faculty member.
- * Essay describing how you believe your work, when complete, will affect policy and improve people's wellbeing (maximum of two pages).

For more information please visit <http://www.iie.org/hewlett-foundationus>

STUDY OPPORTUNITIESThe Center for Gender in Global Context Internships

The Center for Gender in Global Context (GenCen) Internship Program offers internship coordination services and support to MSU undergraduate and graduate students. Students may elect to participate in internships linked to the Gender, Justice, and Environmental Change Internship Program, or to those formerly coordinated by the Women, Gender, and Social Justice Internship Program. Through either of these programs, students will intern with leading organizations working at the local, national, and international levels on gender-related social justice or environmental issues. The internships are open to students from any MSU department or college. Each student intern will work with a supervisor from the host organization and from within his or her department or college, benefiting from the supervisor's experience and expertise in gender, environmental, and/or social justice fields.

Internship Details:

- * Work with the GenCen Internship Coordinator to find the right organization for you and to arrange for MSU credit
- * Flexible schedules
- * Fall and Spring internships are typically 10-20 hours
- * Summer internships can be part-time or full-time
- * Students can do international GenCen internships along with MSU study abroad programs
- * Advanced undergraduate and graduate students are encouraged to apply
- * Most internships are unpaid, however some offer work-study to eligible students. Students are encouraged to contact the GenCen Internship Coordinator to discuss upcoming scholarship opportunities.

Benefits:

- * Receive credit from your department of college for the internship
- * Gain valuable academic and professional experience
- * Find networking opportunities for your future career
- * Organizations will involve students in interesting projects and programs not just clerical work!

Translating Academic Success into Expanded Career Opportunities Workshop

April 5, 8:45am - 3:30pm, Kellogg Center

This workshop is designed primarily for doctoral students who are considering traveling beyond the tenure-track or post-doc route. Four panelists in the morning session will tell you what your professors often don't know and can't answer. From a range of backgrounds (humanities, social, and natural sciences), they will talk about their career moves, and offer practical advice and strategies on learning a new culture and set of assumptions. Topics will include how to effectively present what you do know, how to identify what you don't know, how to present yourself in a resume and an interview, and how to adjust to expectations in different settings. The workshop will also include small group discussion and dialogue with the panelists. In the afternoon, short interactive workshops will engage students in practicing interviewing skills for non-academic positions, identifying and applying networking strategies for professional development opportunities, and learning how to find and apply for federal jobs.

This year's event also incorporates the Graduate School "Etiquette Training" workshop during our lunch session. The owner of First Impressions Training will focus on etiquette for the workplace, with special emphasis on creating a good impression at the "informal" stages of the interview: meals and receptions. Because of the logistics of the lunch session, workshop registration will be limited to 60 students. Registration is required. To register contact gradwrsp@msu.edu. Please include your name, department, e-mail address, name of the workshop, and indicate which afternoon sessions you wish to attend. Also indicate if you will need a vegetarian option for lunch. Each registration includes a formal lunch; because we are providing these free to workshop participants, please register only if you plan to attend the workshop. If your plans change, contact gradwrsp@msu.edu as soon as possible so that others can participate or we can cancel the ordered meal. The workshop will be limited to 60 students on a first come, first serve basis. Parking passes will be provided for the Kellogg Center parking structure.

All submissions for the next issue of the CASID Current for the Spring Semester 2008 are due by 12:00 pm on April 7th. Send to CASID, 202 International Center, ATTN: Christian Reed; e-mail: christianreed@gmail.com; telephone: (517) 353-5925; fax (517) 353-8765.
